ANGELUS ADDRESS: On the Feast of Saints Peter and Paul, June 29, 2017

The Fathers of the Church liked to compare the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul to two columns, on which the visible construction of the Church rests. Both sealed with their blood the witness rendered to Christ, with their preaching and service to the nascent Christian community. This witness is brought to light in the Biblical Readings of today's liturgy, Readings that indicate the reasons by which their faith, confessed and proclaimed, was then crowned with the supreme test of martyrdom.

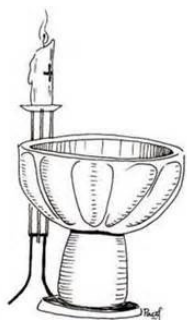

The Book of the Acts of the Apostles (Cf. 12:1-11) relates the event of the imprisonment and subsequent liberation of Peter. He had already experienced the <existing> aversion to the Gospel at Jerusalem, where he was put in prison by king Herod "intending . . . to bring him out to the people" (v. 4). However, he was saved miraculously and thus was able to bring to an end his evangelizing mission, first in the Holy Land and then at Rome, putting all his energy at the service of the Christian community.

Paul also experienced hostility, from which the Lord liberated him. Sent by the Risen One to many cities, to pagan populations, he met with strong resistance, be it on the part of his co-religionists, be it on the part of the civil authorities. Writing to the disciple Timothy, he reflects on his life and his missionary itinerary, as well as on the persecutions suffered because of the Gospel.

These two "liberations" of Peter and Paul, reveal the common path of the two Apostles, who were sent by Jesus to proclaim the Gospel in difficult, and in certain cases hostile, environments. Both, with their personal and ecclesial events, demonstrate and tell us today that the Lord is always at our side, He walks with us; He never abandons us. Especially in the moment of trial, God gives us His hand, He comes to our aid and liberates us from the threats of enemies. However, we remind ourselves that our true enemy is sin, and the Evil One who pushes us to it. When we are reconciled with God, especially in the Sacrament of Penance, receiving the grace of forgiveness, we are liberated from the bonds of evil and relieved of the weight of our errors. Thus we can continue on our way as joyful heralds and witnesses of the Gospel, demonstrating that we have first received mercy.
